COBURG celebrates the 200th birthdays of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert
Under the royal patronage of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II
“Were I not who I am, this would be my real home”

Coburg celebrates Queen Victoria and Prince Albert

The 200th birthdays of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert is occasion enough for the Upper-Franconian town of Coburg to turn its full attention to the 19th century royal couple.

At the latest, ever since Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha - to this day, the most famous of Coburg’s sons - and the British Queen Victoria got married in 1840, the small principality of Coburg has been well-known throughout the world. Marriages of convenience were commonplace in the highest aristocratic circles of the time - but a real love match like between Victoria and her German cousin Albert, was very rare. The couple had 9 children, which are the reason why Coburg’s roots are to be found in aristocratic circles all over the world even today.

Prince Albert and Queen Victoria were, however, much more than a close loving couple. As Queen, Victoria characterised an era that has gone down in history as the “Victorian era”. Albert - thanks to his aristocratic upbringing - highly educated, with a wide range of interests and extremely innovative, was also the closest and most important advisor to the young Queen, who already ascended to the British throne at the age of 18. He designed model farms and thus revolutionised (not only) British agriculture. As the ‘spiritual father’ of social housing, in the 19th century he was already instrumental in the building of affordable homes and significant improving the sanitary conditions for the working class. It was also his idea to hold the first Great Exhibition of the Works of Industry of All Nations in London in 1851 and his designs, the Crystal Palace - a huge steel and glass construction build in London’s Hyde Park especially for the occasion, are regarded as architectural masterpieces to this day.
Their common enthusiasm for architecture, design, art, literature and music, together with a pronounced passion for collecting things, laid the foundation for several world-renowned museums and collections we are still familiar with today - for example the Victoria and Albert Museum in the British capital or their country residence, Osborne House on the Isle of Wight.

When Albert died at the young age of 42, Victoria was deeply devastated, she not only missed her loyal husband, but also the prudent advisor who was able to tell her what to do, as a result she withdrew from the public eye completely. In order to keep his memory alive, in a kind of morbid veneration, she had numerous Albert memorials set up all over the world - the first of them in Coburg - which she also inaugurated in person with her nine children. The statue stands at the centre of the historical market square in Coburg to this day.

In 2019, for the occasion of the 200th birthday of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, a variety of events will take place in Coburg. In addition to numerous exhibitions, lectures and installations, the town in Upper Franconia offers tours with guides in costume as the British Queen. From May, the Coburg state theatre will also focus on the jubilee during the first ever open-air summer festival, with the production of “Robin Hood”, “Shakespeare in Love”, and “A Midsummer Night’s Dream”, as a dance evening. In August and September, “Albert and Victoria” - the musical” can be seen in the magnificent Hall of Giants in the Ehrenburg Palace, and there is a concert with the Coburg state theatre’s symphonic orchestra together with the London Royal Choral Society, first in the British capital in May and then on 8 July in the St Moriz church in Coburg. You can find the details of the performances at the Coburg state theatre under www.landestheater-coburg.de
Permanent Exhibition
Prince Albert’s Progeny - All Nine! for Coburg

Through shrewd marriage politics and wise diplomacy, the family of the ducal House of Coburg successfully „conquered“ four European thrones: Belgium, Portugal, Bulgaria and Great Britain. This spectacular family history of the House of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha is at home in Schloss Callenberg. The romantic castle complex was the principal ducal residence for one hundred years and is maintained to this day by the ducal family. On the occasion of the 200th birthday anniversary of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, Schloss Callenberg offers its visitors new insights into the Coburg family’s remarkable web of international kinship - from the past until the present day. 19 May to 8 September
Special Exhibition: “Typically British, very German”
- Victoria & Albert as cultural mediators

In honour of the year of the 200th birthdays of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, the Coburg Doll Museum is concentrating on the cultural transfer between Germany and Britain in the Victorian age. Under the title “Typisch British, very deutsch”, the exhibition uses several examples to demonstrate how, with their personalities and biographies, Queen Victoria and Prince Albert themselves acted as cultural ambassadors. Thus, Prince Albert is said to have brought the custom of the Christmas tree to Britain and a gift to Victoria from Coburg founded all of five generations of dachshunds in England. In turn, the industrialisation which began in England, the English table manners and the English country gardens influenced life in Albert’s German home town. The 1851 Great Exhibition in London, which he initiated, also provided a platform for industrial companies from Coburg, such as the furniture manufacturers Hoffmeister & Grasser, to present their products.

Shakespeare in Love
A play after the script of Marc Norman & Tom Stoppard
Performed by: Landestheater Coburg

London in 1593 at the height of the Elizabethan theater. Two theaters struggle for playwrights and the favor of the public. In the north of the city the Curtain Theater and on the other bank of the River Thames the Rose Theater, built and run by Philipp Henslowe, a businessman in need of money. All his hopes are attached to Will Shakespeare, for whom he commissioned a new comedy. But the young author is in a creative crisis and his new play „Romeo and Ethel, the Pirate Bride“ does not really want to thrive until Will meets and loves the equally beautiful and gifted Viola de Lesseps, his writer’s block will be released and soon flow as in intoxication life and work into each other.

15 June to 4 July
A Midsummer Night’s Dream
(Ballet after William Shakespeare)
Performed by: Landestheater Coburg

The play takes place in ancient Athens and in an enchanted forest adjacent to the city. It covers the narrated time of three days and nights and is about the circumstances of the wedding of a ruling couple. Four actions are intertwined. The framework is the wedding preparation of Theseus and Hippolyta at the court of Athens. Connected with this are the experiences of the craftsmen who rehearse a play for the solemnity of the prince in the adjacent forest of Athens. Right at the beginning, the conflict over the marriage of two aristocratic couples is introduced. In the forest of Athens, the two couples and the artisans encounter fairies and elves and are drawn into the effects of a marital conflict between the elves and Oberon Titania.

Albert and Victoria: the Coburg Connection
Celebrating the 200th birthdays of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert
Performed by: Royal Choral Society and Coburg Philharmonic Orchestra
To celebrate the 200th birthdays of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, the Royal Choral Society (the choir named by Queen Victoria herself in 1888) will join the magnificent Coburg Philharmonic Orchestra (from Prince Albert’s home town) in a special performance of some of the royal couple’s favourite music. Accomplished pianists and excellent singers, Victoria and Albert shared a passion for music. They were particularly keen on Mendelssohn and his music – and this celebratory concert will showcase his works including the beautiful symphony-cantata Lobgesang (Hymn of Praise) and his ‘Reformation’ Symphony. The concert will begin with Mendelssohn’s Hear My Prayer, and will also include a short work composed by Prince Albert himself.

Venue: Morizkirche Coburg, www.landestheater-coburg.de

19 July to 25 October

Albert and Victoria loved each other and – books. And because their dearest relatives lived in Coburg, the former ducal book collections bear witness to these loves and preferences. The Landesbibliothek Coburg, the regional library, illustrates various facets of the personality of the first British royal dream couple from the perspective of their great passion for books. At the heart of the exhibition, there is a little gem: the unique annals of Queen Victoria’s sister-in-law Duchess Alexandrine. From measles in Buckingham Palace to the solemn opening of the Albert Memorial on Coburg Market Square, she provides personal insights into both the private family bonds and those the family allowed the general public to see.

Lechture “Prince Albert and the promotion of arts and craft - a statesman as an artist?” (Sven Hauschke)

Numerous drawings and architectural drafts are documented as attributed to Prince Albert. The Prince is repeatedly described as conceptual and involved artist. The lecture presents various commissioned pieces of art and analyses their authorship. Prince Albert proves to not only be a comprehensively educated Prince Consort, who is successful in every conceivable area, but also a statesman with incredibly creative and formative influence.

26 July to 20 October
In the STUDIO: Victoria & Albert

In the small STUDIO, which is included in the tour of the Veste, the Art Collections provide a multitude of perspectives on the work of the museum. Temporary exhibitions either concentrate on one special object or present particular selections, new acquisitions or restoration projects. On the occasion of the 200th anniversary of the births of Prince Albert and his wife, Queen Victoria, the exhibition in the Studio will be devoted to the royal couple. The Department of Prints and Drawings presents autographs and prints from the Veste Coburg’s own collections that provide a fascinating glance behind the scenes.

International Academic Symposium
Coburg within Europe. Albert and Victoria – Paths and Effects.

As part of the Prince Albert Festival, the Prince Albert Society has organized an international academic symposium with contributions by scholars from all over Europe. Questions will include: What was the development of the Albert and Victoria’s studies? How have Albert and Victoria been portrayed in art, literature and film? Are they still present in today’s public perception and does a jubilee year like 2019 possibly change this? Entrance to the event, which is open to the public, is free but we would kindly ask you to RSVP at prinzalbertgesellschaft@gmail.com.

A special exhibition of Max Brückner’s scenography

Max Brückner (1836 – 1919) impressed the theatre world, as well as numerous princes of his depiction of nature, which he used both for mythological or heroic landscapes. The lively scenarios are particularly eye-catching. Even Richard Wagner was fascinated by them. Prince Albert made it possible for him to continue his studies in London. In turn, through his works the names “Brückner” and “Coburg” became well known all over Europe. The exhibition with drawings, oil paintings and watercolours from the inventory of the Coburg Municipal Collections provides insights into the creation of a stage design and conveys a feeling for the painter’s inspiration.

Special exhibition: The Orkney Isles - Scotland’s outpost between the Atlantic and the North Sea

With a special exhibition, the Natural History Museum Coburg is inviting visitors on an exciting voyage of discovery to the edge of Europe: to the Orkney Islands.
With numerous exhibits and large-format photos, the exhibition shows that the Orkney Islands, with their stone circles, cliffs and castles have their own unique brand of beauty to offer. It is not only the Vikings who have left their mark here, but also the peoples of the Neolithic and Iron Age who have long since disappeared. The visitors learn a lot about the geology, the fauna and flora as well as the past and present of the austere and rugged archipelago.

26 November to 6 January

It is a tradition the Victoria and Albert Museum in London has celebrated for years - every year, a designer is commissioned to create a Christmas tree as a focus for all of the visitors who enter the building through the Grand Entrance from the middle of November. This year, the town of Coburg is being granted a particularly special honour. Thanks to close cooperation with the museum management, students from the design faculty of the Coburg University of Applied Science will be able to design, construct and erect the Christmas tree for the Victoria and Albert Museum. The winning design selected by the jury remains, however, a closely guarded secret right up to the unveiling ceremony in London and is currently being constructed by the students with the help of the pupils of the vocational schools in Sonneberg. Between the middle of November and the end of December, then it will not only stir up some Christmas spirit, but will also form a bridge between Britain and Coburg, reminding those who see it that it was Prince Albert who made the Christmas tree tradition popular in the United Kingdom.
